

Local Restrictions on Keeping Dogs

Many cities and towns have local ordinances limiting the number of pets a person may have, and may also restrict or forbid certain pets, such as exotics.

Certain breeds of dog, such as Pit Bulls, Rottweiler's and other Dog/Wolf mixes are banned in some places. Condominium associations and rental properties often ban all animals or animals that cannot be confined to a cage or aquarium because of the odors and noise associated with them.

All states in the U.S require that dogs are vaccinated against rabies. Due to the large pet overpopulation problem, most shelters require that adopted animals be spayed or neutered.
